

The Lérins Islands, close to Cannes:

The island of Sainte-Marguerite is a little more than a kilometre from the continent, it stretches from west to east over a distance of 3 km, and its width is 900 m away. There are beautiful wood eucalyptus, the oldest in Europe, and pine. The majority of the island is covered by forest, an area protected state-owned, and is the second most visited forest in France.

In addition to this beautiful forest, you'll no doubt be keen to visit Fort Sainte-Marguerite. Built by Richelieu, it has been strengthened by Vauban and served as a state prison. It now welcomes the Sea Museum, with collections of underwater archaeology.

But its tourist attraction has also just what one can visit the cell of the Iron Mask.

The Ile Saint-Honorat is the farthest from the coast and the smaller of the two islands which is long 1 500 m wide, 400 m. It is wooded with pine trees and beautiful maritime pine trees. The Ile Saint-Honorat perpetuates the memory of Honorat d'Arles (Saint Honorat). To the south of the island, you will discover a fortress, built in 1073 to protect monks from pirates.
